

Integrated Education

Some of the major activities under the scheme are:

- Conducting field surveys and assessment of disability
- Development of resource support facilities and instructional materials at various levels
- Training/orientation of resource personnel at various levels
- Conducting awareness campaigns and enrollment drives
- Distribution of assistance to the intended beneficiaries

A Bridge to Success :

Rajappa of Joladala village in Davangere district went in search of menial work to Hosalli taluk in Shimoga district with his family after withdrawing all four of his children from school. During the child census conducted in February 2001 these children were identified and enrolled in Chinnara Angala, a bridge course centre for out-of-school children, started in the Government Higher Primary School at Hosalli. R.Raghavendra, the eldest of these children mainstreamed from this centre, rediscovered his interest in learning and soon topped his class. He also became proficient in Yoga.

Raghavendra's scholastic progress has continued further. He has now successfully completed the qualifying examination for entry into the Navodaya school system. He is an inspiration to thousands of such working children who have returned to school.

The major objective of the IEDC (Integrated Education for Disabled Children) Scheme is to provide education for the disabled children along with normal children in normal schools in the least restrictive possible environment. Financed by the Ministry of Human Resource Development, Government of India, the scheme is being implemented by the department of school education since 1983. At present it is part of the directorate of Primary Education and receiving substantial financial support under SSA.

It has substantial field support from the district DIETs and a large number of voluntary organizations and is being implemented in schools run by the state government as well as registered and recognized societies. The nature of disability includes visual impairment, hearing impairment, mental retardation and orthopedic handicaps. At present over 36,000 children in about 5,600 schools come under the scheme. Nearly 2,000 resource teachers are involved in the instructional programme.
